safety measures, communications with students and parents about food waste reduction efforts, and training and compensation for school personnel supervising the local education provider's implementation of the policy.

Current law establishes the Colorado circular communities enterprise (enterprise) to award grants and other funding and to provide technical assistance to certain entities throughout the state, including local governments, nonprofit and for-profit businesses, public and private schools, and institutions of higher education, that pursue a circular economy for waste management, including waste diversion and aversion. The bill requires the enterprise to consider reducing food waste by incentivizing public schools to develop and implement effective composting or share table programs.

The bill extends limited immunity from civil and criminal liability to school personnel and local education providers that supervise food and beverage redistribution pursuant to policies that include share tables.
